was forwarded to Washington by a gentleman from Ohio. It was duly considered by the cabinet, and a vote taken. The vote was unanimously in favor a pamphlet and study the why and wherefore. 1w of the Ohio gentleman's appointment and Mr. Ewing was directed to wait on the President, and obtain his sanction. On the following morning, Mr. E. called at the White House, and enquired for Gen. Taylor. Maj. Bliss informed him that his excelleney had just gone to the barn to feed Old Whitey, and clean out the stables. Mr. Ewing then proceeded to the barn, where he found the General engaged as had been suggested. The Cabinet Minister and the president, after the usual salutations, seated themselves on a bundle of straw at the back part of the stable.

'General,' said Mr. E, presenting a bundle of papers, 'here is an application for the office of axe-grinder to the Home Department.' He resides in Ohio, and is a personal friend of mine.' The President put his finger to his nose, and, with most profane bluntness, informed Old Buckeye that he would see him damned before he would sanction any more appointments from the State of Ohio. A conversation in a low and rapid tone of voice, now passed between the parties, the substance of which was, a statement on the one hand, and an admission on the other, that, since the fourth of March four hundred thousand removals had been effected and that three hundred and ninety thousand o the new appointments had been made from the State of Ohio. As the conversation terminated, the General seemed to get suddenly excited, and, rising from the bundle of straw, swore he would lick any man that should thereafter ask him to make an appointment from the State of Ohio. Mr. Ewing appeared to be somewhat angry, and both parties, as they walked out of the stable, eyed each for round mixed; 68 for northern yellow. other with a most ferocious expression of counten

No sooner had the President and his Buckeye Minister passed from the stable door, ere things began to assume a serious aspect. General Taylor placed a small chip on his left shoulder, and said he would like to see the man that dare knock it off. This was too much for the Old Salt Boiler, who, exclaiming I'm your chap, made a rapid motion with his left hand towards the General's shoulder, and the chip fell to the ground. By this time, quite a crowd had assembled at the barn, and, form a ring! form a ring! was heard from a dozen voices. A ring was immediately formed, and the parties, Room in the old Northern Exchange. having thrown off their coats, now stood face to face, and the fight commenced.

For a long time, neither appeared to gain any advantage. Both stood up manfully to the work.— Thick and fast fell the blows of the Secretary upon the face and breast of Gen. Taylor; and equally thick and fast descended the Hero's fist apon the broad chest of the Secretary. At length Ewing, making a mighty effort, hit the General near the pit of the stomach, and laid him sprawling on the ground. 'Cheers for Ohio!' 'Huzza for Old Tom!' shouted the crowed; but these expressions of approbation were of short duration. The General was on his feet in an instant, and fronting the Secretary. A keavy blow on the left breast of Ewing staggered him a little, and this was followed by a still more powerful one between the eyes, which sent him in most beautiful gyrations through the air, over the heads of the bystanders, and entirely outside of the ring. If you've any more potaties to dig, bring them on!' exclaimed the General, as he looked about him, with much apparent self-satisfaction. 'Thirty thousand cheers for Old Bony Vista be jabers?' shouted an Irishman who had watched the fight with great anxiety; and cheer upon cheer went up for the General. The Secretary rallied sing his way into the ring, when a couple of police officers arrived upon the ground, and both parties were taken into custody. They were, kinds, with a full assortment of however subsequently discharged without examin-

We have thus fairly given the account of this transaction to the public, as we received it. Our Bark from the root and Paper Rags. Low Prices, and informant is a Locofoco of great frankness and can-dor. He assured us that he had no doubt of the truth of the story, and that it was a violation of General Taylor's pledges which he made before the election. We regret the occurrence as much as any one, and we hope our Locofoco journals, in giving publicity to the unfortunate transaction, will consider that the General is old and childish, and very apt to get out of humor.

MR. MACAULAY .- BROWN TOP BOOTS .- Mr. Macaulay's History of England (writes a Jersey correspondent of Jerrold's News,) has been the subject of clerical antagonism here. Some little time ince a lecture was delivered on Mr. Macaulay at the Jersey Institution, by the Rev. J. Tappin, which excited considerable attention. The lecturer lauded the historian for his freedom and candor in exposing the inconsistencies of his own church, which provoked the displeasure of some of the fraternity. The Rev. Mr. Richards, of St. Paul's, then announced his intention of lecturing on the same subject at the Temperance Hall; Mr. Tappin justified Mr. Macaulay's description of the Puritans, stating that the old leaven was seen in some of the rural districts within the last half century. He once heard, from the lips of an old man of the puritanic school, that when brown top boots were first introduced, he took a fancy to a pair, which he wore for a Sunday or two, when, to his surprise and annoyance, he was summoned to a church meeting to answer he was summoned to a church meeting to answer for the ungodly manner in which he appeared on the Sabbath. The good man with the brown tops looked as awe-stricken as if he had been charged with visiting Bartholomew Fair. The elder gravely rose and stated the judgment of the church, which ran thus: "Should brother George Slater again appear on the Lord's day in ungodly brown top boots, he will be expelled from the church!"

ANCIENT GRAVE STONES .- In digging to place one of the hydrants on the mall, near Park street church (Boston,) several grave stones were dug up by the workmen. On one was this inscription: "John, Son of Samuel and Martha Burrill, aged 3 years 1 mo. Nov. 23 1702." Another contained this inscription: "Jonathan, the son of Jonathan and Sarah Tyng, 8 mos. 12 Sep. 1672." On another: "Here ate payment to the undersigned.
